MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director of Central Intelligence ✓
Deputy Director for Intelligence

FROM: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: CIPC

I'd like to get your ideas when I return on what we want CIPC to undertake, how we should use that instrument in general, and what of the projects suggested here should be tasked to special task forces.

This comes down to a question of how much of the CIPC superstructure is useful and how much of it spins around on work other people have to do.

C
William J. Casey

Proposed Topics for CIPC Studies, ICS 85-3847, dtd 21 Nov 85

I came back to my proposed tasking by you (attached) - the studies should be focused on identifying gaps and making recommendations to you and then that particular committee action should close down

SUBJECT: CIPC Studies

John —

I think the study on Terrorism: Nuclear and CBW Threat and Linkages Among Terrorist Organizations is inappropriate. It is hard to imagine an issue that is receiving higher priority or more attention across the Community already than this one.

The proposal to study Third World Instability in itself betrays a lack of familiarity with work already underway at CIA, not only in looking at these problems individually and regionally, but at developing new methodologies and the development of indicators of military coups and other generic manifestations of instability. If they want to look at Third World instability, why not look at a real problem -- how to get case officers, attaches, embassies, and other elements of the USG (MAAGs and AID) to report the information that is needed for this analysis.

I have no problems with the other three proposals, in addition to the two of yours they liked.
